GARNET FRASER

When gathering with your family at Christmas to watch the movie It's a Wonderful Life, have a small glass of brandy.

Whenever you find yourself comparing one of your kin unfavourably to Jimmy Stewart and Donna Reed, have another glass of brandy and glance around the room to see who might be judging you the same way.

Whenever Clarence the angel talks longingly about getting his wings, take a shot of bourbon and then mince around the room, flapping your arms as feyly as possible.

Whenever Old Man Potter is referred to, take two quick shots of whiskey and then kick anyone in your party named Potter or Oldman.

(Most especially Gary Oldman. Do not under any circumstance kick the Oldman Dam.)

When your mother fixes on the image of Officer Bert Jamieson, and says "Oh, I know that face, who is that? He was in that movie a long time ago, what was the name?" inform her that actor Ward Bond was in more than 200 movies and TV shows, including Rio Bravo (1959) and General Electric Theater's 1954 production of A Turkey for the President, and then drink deeply from your bottomless well of smugness.

Each time your brother scratches at the uncomfortable acrylic sweater Mom gave him, offer him some lotion.

Savour his seething glare at this discreet running gag and then, nervously, have a drink.

When Jimmy Stewart refers to both Bert the cop and Ernie the cab driver, experience an epiphany about how they're probably the inspiration for the Sesame Street characters, tell your family in excited and extended terms how you just figured this out, sense their mute embarrassment, and resolve to quit drinking entirely.

When Old Man Potter tells George, "No securities, no stocks, no bonds. Nothin' but a miserable little $500 equity in a life insurance policy. You're worth more dead than alive," do some quick number-crunching and offer to fetch your dad a double.

When friends and neighbours barge through George's door with money to save him, stare moodily out the window and drain a scotch, unless Dad is already doing the same.

Whenever you're told to get a job already and stop lying around and watching TV, finish your drink, and then politely but firmly tell the premier to leave your house.

When the movie ends, and you prepare to leave the family home for Christmas dinner at your grandmother's, go to the bathroom and discreetly take a swig of rubbing alcohol from the medicine cabinet.

Whenever you seek a hiding place at your grandmother's house — away from your uncle's dirty jokes and your cousins' talk of the brilliant latest episode of Lexx — and you find a sibling from your family already hiding there, both of you have a drink and then retreat to neutral corners.

Whenever you or a relative express what you really feel about each other, cease drinking immediately.

When your woozy efforts to drive back home end in disaster, with you and your family trapped in an inverted, crushed car buried under four feet of snow in a ditch, reflect on Zuzu's Petals and your wasted life. Then try to wriggle under the hood to get a final sip of antifreeze.

Willis whups Stock?

Beloved entertainer eyes Alliance leadership

by Tammy MORAINE

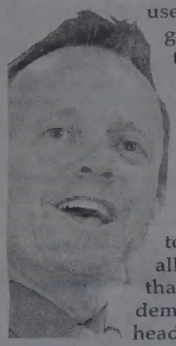
In a speech addressed to Alliance party membership, Chicago resident Wesley Willis promised to "whup Stockwell Day's ass" if supported in his bid for party leadership. The schizophrenic street musician, best known for such cult songs as Rock 'n Roll McDonald's and I Whupped Batman's Ass is considered to be a dark horse in a field that already includes Grant Hill, Stephen Harper and Diana Ablonczy. Willis spent the day greeting party faithful in a head-butting frenzy, eventually singling out Ezra Levant for particular attention.

"Ezra! Say boo-yah," commanded the energetic, six-foot-five vocalist. "Uh, boo-yah," stammered the clearly bewildered ideologue, after which he braced himself for the successive blows to the head that constitute the trademark Wesley Willis hello. Much to his relief, Levant was rescued from Willis' enthusiastic welcome after organizer Rahim Jaffer lured the candidate away with a tray of Wendy's cheeseburgers. Despite the unusual greeting, the ex-Edmonton Sun columnist and law student was impressed by the candidate's blunt honesty and infectious abandon. Willis used the gathering to address certain statements attributed to his detractors, allowing that "the demon in my head talks to me with profanity. I do not want to hear. The demon thinks I'm a bum, a jerk, and an a-hole."



Political thinkers believe that the demon is in the minority. Thoughtful observers of the political scene have commented that Willis may be the only viable candidate to keep the Alliance party from further turmoil, that it is clear the Alliance is in need of a leader with vision and charisma. After a promising start as official opposition, the Alliance experienced a rocky 2001 when key party stalwarts publicly questioned Stockwell Day's leadership. The schism further deepened when several MPs, led by Deborah Grey, chose to sit as independents in the House of Commons. The resulting confusion has left leadership of the party wide open.

"Willis has the makings of a powerful political figure," remarks University of Alberta political observer Allan Tupper. "But many of his stated goals invite closer observation. Didn't he once claim to 'whup Saddam Hussein's ass'? That's a pretty tough foreign policy stand. I do, however, appreciate the sentiment in his song I'm Sorry That I Got Fat, I Will Slim Down. That's not unlike Ralph Klein's canny exploitation of his alcohol problem. I saw him scarfing down those cheeseburgers however, so I remain unconvinced."

In any event, the question of Willis' candidacy may be moot; Willis is still an American citizen, and he maintains a strenuous touring schedule that may conflict with his political aims. The songwriter/artist, who has invited Canadians to "go on a harmony joy bus ride, rather than on a freakout hell bus ride," will be in Edmonton to whip up support for his platform. And for the old guard of the Alliance party, Willis promises a tough fight for the leadership, hinting at a struggle just short of a war.

"I try to be a good person," he asserts, "so I won't hit nobody upside the head with a brick 'cause I don't want to look out from behind bars."

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE Before considering a move to right-wing politics, singer Wesley Willis could frequently be found basking in the love of common folk.

Letters

Ralf rulez!

Editor, SEE:

i take exception to your proclamation of " impeach ralf, impeach ralf!" as president and founding member of the ralf klein fan club i have had the honour of meeting mr. klein on several public and, sadly, only a few private occasions.

yes, our great leader does indeed enjoy a drink or two now and then but who doesn't? so he gets a bit boisterous, perhaps a tad colourful and can enjoy the occasional racial or homophobic slur, but these all speak to his festive nature. as ralfie himself has said to me through tears, head resting on the toilet bowl, he is a misunderstood man.

can you show evidence that this man cannot at once enjoy a good spanking and lead our province to glory?? i think not. you disgust me.

From stupor to super:
Bill Smith's shocking transformation

It's Mayorman!

Spawn creator Todd McFarlane does what no other political handler has been able to: Give Bill Smith a personality

by Stephen NOTLEY

At a gala ceremony at City Hall yesterday, comic creator Todd McFarlane unveiled his new design for Edmonton City Mayor Bill Smith.

Councillors and onlookers alike gasped audibly at Smith's transformation. Formerly a bland middle-aged man, Smith now crackles with power, his cloak a sheet of living flame and his fists the hammers of God himself.

"We just thought it was time for a change," chuckled Smith. "People had somehow gotten the impression I was a dough-minded puppet of local business interests, a mouthpiece of meaningless boosterism. A simpleton, really.

"But I'm not that," he added. "Not any more."

The mayor then leapt 70 feet in the air and punched his fist through the City Hall clock tower.

Spawn creator McFarlane was the obvious choice for the redesign, as only months ago he completed the triumphant third Oilers jersey that was so great that everybody just had to go right out and get one, or maybe more, because they were so great.

"It was kind of a tough challenge," said McFarlane. "Redesigning a team logo is one thing — redesigning an entire human being is something completely different.

"But actually it turned out to be pretty simple; I just threw together old Spider-Man sketches with some leftover Spawn stuff, and stuck Smith's head on it. And then I added spikes. It was a pretty easy half mil," McFarlane went on.

"Edmonton is where, again?" he added.

With his new powers and image, Mayor Smith hopes to head right back to work, promoting Edmonton at home, abroad, and in space.

"There are people in other cities and galaxies who haven't heard about Edmonton's beautiful river valley, or our friendly investment climate," ethused the mayor. "As well, I hope to carry the Edmonton message into more metaphorical realms like Hell and the world of dreams."

"None shall escape knowing what a great place Edmonton is to live, especially for families."

"I believe in Edmonton," prattled the mayor. "Go Oilers," he added reflexively.

Along with his new image, the Mayor has been given a new origin and history as well. No longer is he a former football player and three-time mayoral election winner. Now Smith is a super-evolved being from a future when humanity has destroyed Heaven, and he became mayor in a single burst of pure, incomprehensible light.

As well, while the mayor's former SUV was sufficiently powerful for a mortal leader of men, it could never be the steed of a god, and has been replaced by Rogok the furious war-elephant, he who gored the Calgary dragon on his golden tusks. Rogok suffers no bit or bridle, and parks where he pleases. Responses to the new design were mixed.

Councillor Michael Phair praised the change as "trivial, but not actually harmful."

Not all councillors were impressed, however.

"Edmontonians had their shot at a completely insubstantial image change at City Hall, but they didn't elect me," fumed mayoral failure Robert Noce. "I should be the superhero, not him. No, wait. Listen to me. I am a superhero."

"Maybe we can finally get something done about these Asian gangs, at least," sulked defeated mayoral candidate Mike Nickel. "I fully expect the Mayor to work with the new police helicopter in erasing all super-criminal or terrorist activity in Edmonton. With great power comes great responsibility to the taxpayers of this city."

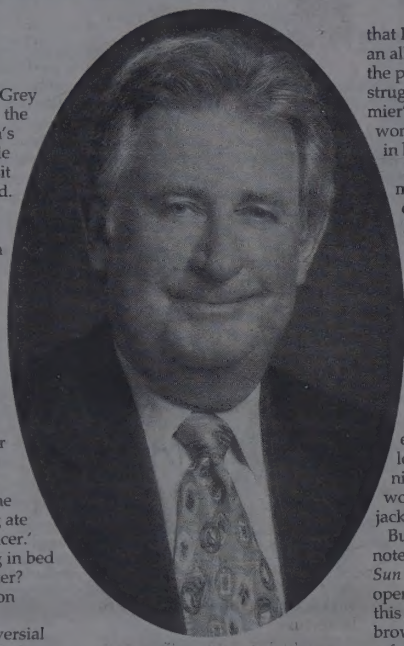
'THEY'RE A CANCER ON TAXPAYERS'

Ralph to kids: Get over it, already

by Tim MALLOY



The white corridors of the Grey Nuns hospital resounded to the drunken laughter of Alberta's premier as Ralph Klein made an unexpected midnight visit to the children's cancer ward. Doctors and nurses ducked out of sight while Klein woozily plopped himself on the edge of a chair in the middle of the room.

"Jesus," observed the premier to one little boy named Billy, "you don't look all that bad to me. Sure it's not all in your head?"

Education Minister Lyle Oberg, standing to the other side of the bed, observed to attendants that "kids are goofs, always looking for the easy out. 'I'm tired, the dog ate my homework, I've got cancer.' And besides, how can lying in bed possibly make you any better? This province wasn't built on malingerers."

In light of Klein's controversial pre Christmas visit to the Herb Jamieson Centre, the hospital visit may seem to some like the kiss of death for Klein's political career.

But many Albertan's have indicated their continuing support for the premier, and recent polls suggest that Klein's popularity is riding at an all-time high, especially with the public announcement of his struggle with alcoholism. The premier's "regular guy" persona has won him a great deal of latitude in his personal behavior.

Media coverage has been mixed; long retired or possibly dead Sun columnist Lubor Zink expressed the prevailing view cogently in a recent editorial when he argued that "Albertans have grown fed up with the mollycoddling that goes on in society."

Alberta Report's Ted Byfield also expressed satisfaction with Klein's recent adventures, noting that "it is time that the citizens were reminded of the steel caress of the leader. With the growing feminization of society, perhaps it would not be so bad to feel the jackboots upon the land again."

But perhaps the most sobering note in the affair was injected by Sun columnist Graham Hicks, who openly worried about what effect this could have on his brazen brownnosing of the rich and powerful. Klein, who has also expressed a desire for a possible visit to a mosque, was unavailable for comment.

First-class boor

TERROR IN THE SKIES

Our society columnist tries her hand at a little domestic terrorism

by Asian WOMAN

Since the Recent Tragic Events, aircraft safety, above all has been of paramount concern. In the interest of investigative journalism, I decided to forgo the usual dinners with the most important Canadian celebrities to test the security at our airports myself.

I carried with me a box cutter, a knife, bear spray, and an eyelash curler. At check in, they confiscated some stiff cardboard. In spite of my repeated comments about my various armaments, the security guards merely patted my bobbed head and asked me where my mom was.

Once on board, I settled in and had a Manhattan. Lunch consisted of a salad of laitue frisee with a champagne vinaigrette, a crusty roll and roasted Mediterranean vegetables, which I promptly employed as projectile weapons. Thus discombobulated, the flight attendants attempted to disarm me but were thwarted by the pepper spray. Once that was completely discharged, I moved on.

Spotting Deepak Chopra in First Class, I sat down next to him and told him he looked, um, his age. "How do we deal with suffering, loss, grief? How do we deal with evil?" he began. Sighing heavily, he concluded, "But I'm famous and they're not." Then he grabbed his Evian bottle and got up to leave. So I forced my elbow into the crook of his neck, felling him and possibly crippling the entire book tour for his latest self-help screed, The Deeper Wound: Recovering Your Soul from Fear and Suffering.

I got up, and while doing so struck a match to ignite the overhead oxygen. As passengers tried in vain to put out the blaze, I marched down the aisle with box cutter in hand, teasingly slicing a handful of hair from the top of Adrienne Clarkson's screaming head. There can only be one Asian Woman in the Canadian popular imagination, and it damn well better be me.

Adrienne cowered; I moved on. I treated fellow journalist Ian Hanomansing with a wet lick on the back of his mahogany neck — fuck is that guy ever hot for a CBC anchor. Yeah, and Evan Solomon too. An Ian and Evan sandwich would be an excellent Dinner for this Asian Woman.

Thankfully, security missed taking the cardboard from my reporter's notepad which in an instant I fashioned into a serrated papercut-delivery device which I used on the coach class passengers except for the entire corps of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, those eating-disorder triggers. On them, I plied my eyelash curler, doused in the refreshing vinaigrette. Ignoring the screams from throughout the aircraft, I again seated myself and pulled out my laptop.

My conclusion? There's nowhere that's safe. I can be bought! A diminutive Asian woman could get on a plane with an AK-47 in her purse and explosives strapped to her chest and no one would suspect a thing. C'mon! A couple hundred thou would make a lot of my problems easier to handle. Our freedom to be mercenaries to the highest bidder must be preserved. God bless us, every one.

Taliban... or AstroTaliban? With Dell the Funky Fundamentalist Saturday, Jan. 5th, undisclosed underground location Sunday, Jan. 6th all-ages show at New City Likwid Lounge

Sometimes the best way to get your band noticed is to take the hardline approach to music. Case in point: Taliban... or AstroTaliban?, one of the most talked about instrumental space/surf-rock bands to come out of the Middle East. Since their inception in '96, the five-piece ensemble of staunchly religious, heavily bearded musicians have practically outlawed the competition.

"We describe our approach as 'fanatical'," intones guitarist and self-described visionary Omar Gravity-Vector. "We strictly forbid all other forms of sci-fi inspired surf guitar. In fact, we make it our law to suppress alternate forms of groovy astro-rock bands — crushing them, much like a child's kite."

Gravity-Vector, who doesn't normally grant interviews with "Western Pig-dogs," explains that his band has become increasingly strict in order to create the "pure listening experience" that characterizes Taliban... or AstroTaliban?

"At all costs we must quell the poisonous influences of the outside world. It is with unquestioned authority and radical string-bending that we will wage our war against the infidels. We despise all aspects of worthless North American culture, well, except for the surf-rock of Dick Dale, classic science fiction, and my gorgeous Fender Strat."

Striking a pose in a publicity shot

While their staunch approach has garnered them a strong cult following, it hasn't been without a price. Not only is it difficult to sell out gigs where women, children and the beardless are strictly forbidden, but just try cracking the Billboard Top 100 when your album has been banned and your only video is essentially a shaky, clandestine video of public torture.

Now THAT'S metal

"Gigging is primary means of sanctioned support," states Gravity-Vector. "We made an album in '99 called Tora Borealis which we immediately had outlawed, confiscated and burned in the streets. Anyone caught with a copy was flogged in the stadium before a jeering crowd of onlookers. A glorious but frustrating scenario, I assure you."

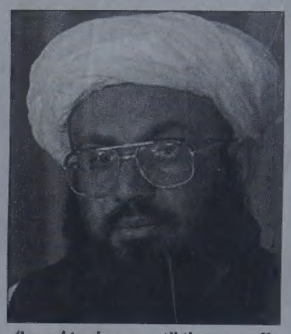
The members of TOAT are as hard on themselves as they are on their fans, however. In a scenario that has been described as "like Spinal Tap, but much less funny," the group has mutilated or killed half of a dozen drummers since they started out. The offences have ranged from dancing to blowing out an amp. Their last drummer had his hand cut off after missing practice.

"[The drummer] was weak. His disrespect was intolerable, so yes, I cut off his hand, but it's not like we kicked him out of the group — that is an unfounded lie spread by the immoral American media. In fact, we even toured with him for a while until he went into self-imposed exile. It was simply a case of artistic differences — he said he couldn't do the Def Leppard thing."

Sometimes this loathing has unexpected consequences. Vector's habit of burning his instrument out of spite after each gig has been interpreted by fans as the ultimate Hendrix tribute. But the mere mention of the unintented reception only enrages the volatile artist, causing him to spit on the floor and threaten a Fatwa.

So why then does a group that so thoroughly despises almost all aspects of Western culture to such a degree tour North America so regularly?

Omar Gravity-Vector and his second-favourite instrument



'I used to drum, until they cut off my hand'

"We will take your money and use it to destroy you," says Vector, addressing the bigger issue. "Our gig money is going towards the purchase of Kalashnikovs, rocket launchers, various other weapons and... oh yeah, a newer model Ford Econoline touring van."

"But really, there's nothing quite like the experience of traveling the world and despising new people. If nothing else, it also allows us to get out of our jam space and play a bit. I mean seriously, have you ever tried to rock out in a cave? The acoustics are insufferable."

Relax: it's theatre

Come to a different cabaret

by Kevin X. WILSON

Preview
Cocktails for Two Hundred
Image Theatre
Jan 8-13, 15-19
8 p.m.
Jekyl and Hyde Pub

If there's a problem with the musical Cabaret, it's that the cabaret part is all in your head and not on your lips.

Of course, the Citadel's enthusiastically received production succeeded in part precisely because it evoked the atmosphere of a Berlin nightclub so convincingly.But some of you, duly persuaded, might have fancied a little something wet and refreshing to make the experience doubly authentic.

Well, you needn't be shy about ordering a beverage in the middle of Cocktails for Two Hundred, opening this week at the Jekyl and Hyde Pub. In fact, Image Theatre artistic director Robert Loucks wants you set aside your assumption that "theatre" means "formal."

This show's intended audience is composed of "people who want to go out for an evening and relax and enjoy themselves. If they want to smoke, there's a smoking area. They can order something to eat, they can order a drink, they can visit." Patrons can arrive an hour early and stay as late as they'd like.

Cocktails for Two Hundred is a domestic comedy about a show biz couple, Charles (Joseph Chambrinho) and Daphne (Chantal Perron) who click onstage and off — "You can imagine that their sex life is fantastic," says Loucks — until they live together.

Charles finds his recital hijacked by his ex, who then cajoles him into performing at a party for 200 guests — although director Loucks notes that in this case a maximum 75 will witness the musically charged contretemps that results.

He says that the company found the show "by chance almost. We were looking for a small musical that didn't have too many people in it." The tunes appealed to him instantly: "The music is upbeat. There's lots of variety: It goes all the way from opera to [country and] western."

But of the show's creators, James Saar and Bob Ashley, the director says, "I know nothing more about them.They did [the show] at the Charlottetown festival 10 years ago," says Loucks, "and it must have been a hit, because it's a lot of fun."

Making history

Musical revisits the idea of America

by Kevin X. WILSON

Preview
Ragtime
January 4-6
Jubilee Auditorium

Considered by some the first genuinely American musical form, the syncopated style called ragtime playfully monkeys with our rhythmic expectations.

Likewise, Ragtime the novel tinkers with our notions of history and fiction, erasing the line you may have thought kept the peace between the two. E.L. Doctorow's critical and popular triumph mixes liberal helpings of invention with turn-of-the-century fact, blending the lives of Henry Ford, Booker T. Washington and Harry Houdini with the histories of three fictional families: one black, from Harlem; one Jewish, newly arrived in America; one established, white and well-to-do.

In compressing Doctorow's sprawling novel into a couple of hours, something had to give, but actor James Walsh, who read the book only after joining the show's touring company, is impressed by the result. "I was amazed at how much of the material, how much of the spirit of the book I was able to comprehend and intuit just from being in the show."

Although Walsh didn't know much of the novel, he had more than a passing familiarity with the musical. After time spent in California working in the film biz, Walsh returned to New York, where the Rhode Island native has lived for 21 years. "I worked for a couple of years as a temp in the computer business," he says. In fact he continues to telecommute for a major financial services firm while he's on tour.

"When I first started working for them, I would have the [Ragtime] CD in my computer while I was at work and just dream of what it would be like to be in these big scenes and these big choral numbers on stage."

Walsh's character, the immigrant Tateh, is also a dreamer. "He comes to America to make it. In his pursuit of the American dream, he does the thing which he promises not to do, which is to give up his little girl."

Unconventional, dense, challenging, Ragtime seems an unlikely bestseller. Walsh attributes its popular success to the way that it revisits an ideal "We as Americans, and people who live outside of America, are sold this idea of what America is all about." Instead of indulging a taste for empty symbolism,he says, Ragtime considers what those symbols were meant to stand for. I think what Ragtime does is really explore what 'American' means, what it really means [...] the idea that theoretically inspired people to create America, what it is at its heart."

Happy Blue Year

2001 a motherlode of musical memories

Ahead of the Beat
PETER NORTH

2001 wasn't the most bountiful year for local blues fans but when all the highlights are taken into consideration at once, there were certainly more than enough quality shows presented in concert, festival, and club settings to keep us satisfied.

Blues On Whyte, the Yardbird Suite, Festival Place, the Folk Festival, Jazz City, the Sidetrack and Blues International were the spokes that kept the wheel turning.

A few of the major names in the genre rolled through town, most notably Buddy Guy, B.B. King, Robert Cray and John Hammond, while the Blues Festival gave us legends Hubert Sumlin and Pinetop Perkins as part of the Rolling Ford Revue. The great Dr. John closed the three-day event that drew its best crowds yet who were finally treated to weather that complimented the hot lineup.

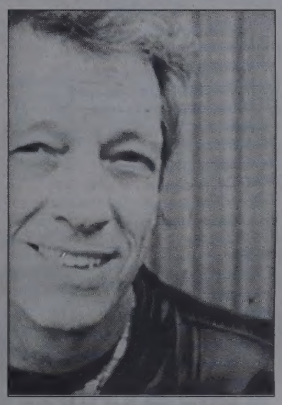
Cam Hayden, who booked much of the talent that was presented at the Hawrelak Park Amphitheatre, looks back on the third edition of the festival with fond memories.

"We knew going into it that Janiva Magness was going to be a real hit. It's great to see that acts like Janiva and Rusty Zinn are now making Edmonton part of their touring circuit after getting exposure at Blues International shows," says the man who drew another ace when Paul deLay cancelled his Blues Festival appearance at the last minute.

"To have Curtis Salgado come in on such short notice and really light the opening night up was one of those serendipitous things," added Hayden.

The blues format that allows for one show a month at the Yardbird Suite is working at the gate as acts like Lisa Otey, Johnny Rawls, Ann Rabson, the harmonica festival with Mojo Buford, and Jimmy "T-99" Nelson all drew full houses. This is one observer who wouldn't mind seeing some Canadian content thrown into the mix once in a blue moon, perhaps someone like Toronto's Michael Pickett.

Other memorable shows include the Deborah Coleman/Hot Cottage bill that had the Arts Barns shakin', the Tim Williams Band at Blues On Whyte, Tim Williams again, in a strong supporting role backing Jackie Richardson at the Roxy Theatre in the Big Mama Thornton play, Harry Manx's contributions to Come On In My Kitchen II, and Jack deKeyzer at Blues On Whyte.



John Hammond

This listener's "blues event of the year" came from John Hammond, who delivered a knock out punch with his Wicked Grin album, comprised of Tom Waits tunes. I had the chance to see touring show twice and his concert at the Yale in Vancouver was nothing short of brilliant. Unfortunately, Hammond was slightly pre-occupied for his concert here at the Winspear thanks to the unsettling turn of events that overshadowed much of the music presented at Jazz City this year.

A close second was Maria Muldaur's Richland Woman Blues recording for Stony Plain Records that found the singer baptizing herself in the songs of Bessie Smith, Memphis Minnie and Rev. Gary Davis.

There were a handful of other notable blues treats in 2001. One was the opportunity to catch the Metro screening of the excellent documentary Louie Bluie that focused on the music of blues fiddler Howard Armstrong. Another was immersing myself in Bill Wyman's exhaustive history of the music titled Blues Odyssey, while Charles Shaar Murray's biography of John Lee Hooker, titled Boogie Man, was also a detailed and insightful read. Little did we know that the last chapter of John Lee's life was being written in 2001.

On the disc front there were some fine compilations including one from Irma Thomas titled If You Want It, Come and Get It on Rounder Heritage. True North Records issued a couple of good ones including the Mississippi John Hurt set Revisited and Albert King's Guitar Man. Two of the better re-issues were Mississippi Delta Bluesman from Honeyboy Edwards and the classic Muddy Waters at Newport:1960. To round it all out, four of my favorite releases of new material were Jimmie Vaughan's Do You Get The Blues?, Chris Thomas King's The Legend of Tommy Johnson, 51 Phantom from the North Mississippi All-stars and the unexpected surprise of the year, the blues-dipped Heretics and Privateers from Steppenwolf's John Kay.

Happy new year everyone.

ROCK HIM TONIGHT Billy Squier fans will no doubt approve of a new tribute project that gives the late '70s pop rocker another 15 minutes of possible stardom.

Can smash CD revive sit-com star's career?

by Craig ELLIOTT

Oh, Life, you bitch! How your caress is but a mixed blessing! The years come, the years go; sometimes they are good years, but just as often, they are hard. Of course, some would appear to have it worse than others do. For example, take the Fuckwits, please. Is this a joke? I Can't Do Anything Right (Ind.) features in 30 hardcore minutes 20 hardcore stories of how they can't keep a job, can't get enough of their shit together to keep an EI claim afloat, can't find a girlfriend, never have money for smokes, don't like their families, etc.

It starts out funny the way other people's troubles often do, but gets pretty pathetic after awhile, especially given their further inability to sing, play, or employ even the most rudimentary rhyme schemes and song structures. That they recorded it over a pre-recorded Glass Tiger cassette is, again, pathetic (unless it's a joke; then it's brilliant).

Did someone say "brilliant"? Ooh, Billy Squier. One day, you're the 1980s' answer to Grand Funk Railroad, the next, you're ill advisedly mincing around a bedroom set in the video for Rock Me Tonight and a few days after that, nobody knows you. Ooh, Billy.

Flash forward a coupla decades, however, and you'll see it ends okay. We may never know whether love or money motivated those artists on I Can See You Cumming On Me and I Can't Ask For More: A Tribute to Billy Squier (Mercury) to contribute, but wow. Submitted for our approval: Rammstein and Rock Me Tonight grind your bones into a fine powder while Paul Westerberg does a wry take on The Stroke; in Arab Strap's hands, My Kinda Lover turns tearjerker, and DJ Spooky's plunderphonic-style reworking of Everybody Wants You needs to be heard to be believed, as, I suppose, does the rest of this CD.

Did somebody says "needs to be heard to be believed"? The bio says Donnie Most has been buzzing around under the mainstream radar for a few years now, reinventing himself, but times like this call for caution, don't they?

No! Throw that caution to the wind, friend, because... well, because. Combine a Jacques Brel-inspired croon with some sensitive spoken word and inspired programmed beats for a backdrop and what do you get? Fantastic stuff all around; Madonna will be stealing the best of this for use in the mainstream in another five years.

Curiously, the record is named for the one role for which he's known, though Most studiously avoids any further reference to the pink-skinned sidekick he played on TV, at least until the buried track at the end, which makes liberal use of his less than overwhelming "I still got it!" tag-line, breaking it down, exposing it for the fraud that it is, then rebuilding it into a masterpiece of modern pop-cultural commentary, all in a little under seven minutes. Too late for last year's Top Tens and too early for 2002, Malph! (P'tit Malaise) could very easily slip through the cracks if we're not careful. Don't let it.

Shut up!

Summers' Feelings best buried deep inside

■ BOBBY SUMMERS
■ MY FEELINGS!
■ EXPRESSIONS RECORDS

The sophomore release from Mr. Summers is what you'd call a mixed blessing — sort of like a cuddly puppyful of cancer. Exacerbating the whiny folksy musings he devised for FANTASY!, his weepy first disc, Summers conjures up a band in tune — and yet utterly tone deaf — with his feeble muse. They might actually make you pine for the kitchen-utensil instrumentation of the first album. And yet, somehow, it all manages to touch the heart, but not in ways you want to go blabbing to anyone else.

Lyrically, the world proves to be too much for Summers sometimes, to the point that he's retreated into a brain-addled fantasy realm of wizard dogs (shades of Harry Potter), cornucopic skateboards and birthday gerbils. For a whiff of what hell must smell like, put on Excuse Me, I Think I'm Having Feelings, in which he whinges his way through an interminable litany of self-pity, decresendoing to an insufferable whimper that you will wish was produced by repeated kicks to Mr. Summers' ribcage. If this is what passes for feelings in Bobby Summers' world, he should learn to keep them to himself.

■ BIG PUN
■ D-COMPOZISHUNS
■ ROLLIN' 6-UNDER RECORDS

They say you can't squeeze blood from a stone, but if Tupac and Biggie have taught us anything, it's that you can squeeze a few more albums from a dead rapper. And while some of Tupac's best work was released posthumously, the latest post-mortem disc from Bronx rapper Big Pun is a wormy endeavour — literally. Aside from a few muddy demo-vocals, the bulk of Pun's contribution is sounds recorded by a mic he was buried with. Hissing noises of gas escaping from his corpse are digitized, looped and run through a series of effects that are then added to guest vocals to comprise the 13 lifeless tracks. Particularly bad is Ssssssssss, crick, blap where the flatulent effects overpower Raekwon's lacklustre vocals. Equally vile, however, is P Diddy's latest Police rip-off, titled Don't Stink So Close to Me '01. Perhaps the only redeeming song has the Fat Boys reuniting to sweat out the upbeat Ain't No Taco Bell in Heaven. Overall, D-Compozishuns serves as a reminder that the trend of making rap records from beyond the grave has pretty much run out of gas.

■ PROJECT WYZE
■ MISFITS. STRANGERS. LIARS. FRIENDS
■ SONY MUSIC

Basically the closest thing you'll find to Creed in the rap metal world, this is the sort of competent but uninspired filler that will only appeal to those who wholeheartedly believe everything in the genre is, by virtue of existence, mega street-cred cool, without any regard for individual merit. These guys are such a third-generation knockoff that their grandparents must have come over from the old country riding on the bandwagon. So these angst-ridden dudes are supposedly the first Canuck rap-metal outfit (thankfully neglecting a little band called Serial Joe)? Who really cares, aside from possibly the guy programming Canadian content on The Bear?

—Adam Houston

■ NEURK BLØVIST
■ BED LAMB CURRY
■ HERMENEUTIC SOUNDSCAPES

Bløvist is certainly one of the greatest names in Scandanavian free improvised music, though unknown on these shores. Following the lead of first wave European improvisers like Derek Bailey and Barry Guy by eschewing 'musical technique,' Bløvist actively seeks new ways to play conventional instruments. The approach is a natural fit on the title track, an Indian-influenced cut featuring the sound of clay pots smashed to pieces by a sitar. Bløvist draws a subtly shifting penumbra of tonalities from a trombone bashed into a Moog synthesizer on Chocolate Orange Laxative but Hornswoggle, the 25-minute tribute to saxophone improviser Evan Parker on which Bløvist uses a chain haul to bash Parker into pianist Fred van Hove is a touch repetitive, especially as it becomes obvious that Parker and van Hove are both unconscious. What possessed Bløvist to release this as a six-CD set packed in sleeves made out of used staples is anyone's guess, but I'm going to say it's sublime anyway.

SOUL MAN Kirby's favourite moments of 2001 revolved around putting together Soul Sacrifice, a tribute to the music of Santana.

A very good year

Kirby toasts 2001 — no fooling

I always write in the third person; I (almost) never write "I." I hate it when writers do that — Jann Wenner from Rolling Stone would have their heads. 'Course at that level, maybe if you are Hunter Thompson or David Fricke or Chet Flippo someone might care what you did on the way to the gig. Somebody named Kirby from a street rag in River City — I don't think so. Yet every year end, I write a personal piece. It always feels a little pretentious, like a newsletter to a readership I only assume I have, but what the hell? I'm a columnist, not a reporter. That means it doesn't have to have any basis in reality, it's just cuz I just say so. So, my end of the year wrap which I like to call, "these were a few of my favourite things."

Soul Sacrifice is right up there as a major source of fun for me in 2001. Pete North, Dennis Meneely and I put together a "Celebration of Santana" band with drummer Bill Hobson, bassist Duane Smith and guitarist Barrie Nighswander from Tacoy Ryde, who were my first band. In what other city in Canada could you find percussionists like Tilo Paiz and Mario Allende? I had worked with both drummers and knew they not only played like those excellent Afro-Cuban cats Santana had, they were those guys. They studied it, lived it and are the real deal. Christian Mena being back in Edmonton was a bonus for me personally and professionally. I am very grateful that he acquiesced to handle vocals. He is an absolutely amazing pure singer with some fine moves and great stage presence. But I respect him most for usurping me of my role as supreme commander of music trivia. Having Malaika Barriffe and Jimmy Whiffen sing, making for three strong singers, is a real added attraction to the band. Soul Sacrifice played some great gigs this year, the best of which was the fabulous Commodore Ballroom in Vancouver. A totally professional room front to back — mixing in there was quite an experience.

The ¡Maracujah! gig at the Sidetrack was monumental for me. I loved that band. Still do.

Pete had me mix a gig at Festival Place in Sherwood Park and I have now been out there quite a bit, and it is terrific. It's a beautiful theatre.

I had a great year of Hair Of the Dog Saturday afternoons at The Black Dog.

This past year the Prairie Music Alliance hired me as their Festival Coordinator. It was time consuming, interesting, at times a tad stressful but I'm glad I did it and by all reports we did well here in River City.

I thought I would never care if I ever booked another venue, t. Turns out I do. Tin Pan Alley is an exceptional room with very good sightlines and a warm atmosphere. Plus, my faith in club owners is being restored.

For me, it was a very good year. I had many and varied sources of work, and it was busy, productive and gratifying.

I must extend a resounding thank you to all who wanted to work with me. To me it's not only a living, it's a show of faith: Soul Sacrifice, ¡Maracujah!, ¡Bomba!, Pete North, Vince Monk and Oliver Friedmann, Gavin Farmer, Wayne and Colleen Sopps, SEE Magazine and Gord Nielsen, the PMA. Also, much gratitude to Scott Lingley for raising the bar. And big thanks to Brent, Derpy and Drew — they'll know why.

To the SEE Magazine readers, you special people, all the best to you in 2002; health, happiness and success for all!

EVERYONE KNOWS their place in society in Robert Altman's Gosford Park.

Idle worship

Examination of privileged class over-the-top, but enjoyable

by Mari SASANO

Review

Gosford Park
Opens Friday
Directed by Robert Altman
Cineplex Odeon
★★★★ (out of five)

Robert Altman is best known for his gigantic ensemble casts and rambling, tangential plotlines. With Gosford Park, he moves his kit to 1930s rural England and the country house for an aristocratic hunting party — an ant's nest of social convention, cliquishness and repression.

Kelly Macdonald (remember jailbait Diane from Trainspotting?) plays acolyte of servitude Mary Maceachran, in training to tend to the spoiled Constance, Countess of Trentham (Maggie Smith). All the ladies and gents have been invited to a shooting party at the home of Sir William McCordle (Michael Gambon), an eccentric patriarch who dotes on his tiny dog and bores his wife Sylvia (Kristin Scott Thomas). As this will primarily be a fable about class and vocation, into the mix comes movie star Ivor Novello, Esq. (Jeremy Northam) and obnoxious Hollywood producer Morris Weissman, Esq. (Bob Balaban) as "the commoners."

Downstairs, the buzz is all about the peculiar valet of Weissman (Ryan Phillippe, all Connery-accented and wearing it well) who doesn't seem to understand the basic etiquette of servitude. And what of Robert Parks, the mysterious orphan? Mary takes it all in, trying to suss out the politics and gossip that pleases her lady. Then the murder…

It begins like Jane Austen and ends like Clue, an American's fantasy of the British upper classes. The actual mechanical interventions of the story — the hunt, the murder, the police investigation — feel forced since the thrust of the narrative is driven by the whispered psychodramas, intimate betrayals and delicate interactions between the upper classes and their hired help.

As expected, the aristocracy are mean, shallow, idle and boring. Mostly they hate to be there but clearly would fare no better elsewhere. Oh, the ennui of society life! The servants have their own dramas, but we are allowed to feel sorry for them when Altman rather hamfistedly proclaims the fate of their birth here and there in awkward attempts at commentary.

Unfortunately, such tactics are unnecessary since the mere existence of such culturally ingrained social strata are inherently unfair without requiring swells of strings and wearied looks to underscore that point.

MAGGIE SMITH gets the royal treatment as the archly regal Countess of Trentham.

My point being, it's rather simplified in a way that, say, Remains of the Day was not. And THAT was written by a Japanese, of all people. Ahem. But where sighs and pathos fail, the film shines when the staff, hiding in hallways and behind doors, exalt in a performance by the showman Novello, the likes of whom they truly admire — while the dullards upstairs try to outdo each other in trying to appear each more bored than the next of this working-class entertainment.

But while somewhat over the top, Gosford Park is not wholly unenjoyable. In fact, compared to the more recent works in Altman's oeuvre, it's quite entertaining indeed. The Altman style seems less like an obvious, gratuitous schtick since we are expected to eavesdrop along with the servants.

Now go get me a glass of hot milk.

GET THAT BOMB! Too late... not even the vivosec can save us now.

Impostor? Fraud!

No shelter from Gary Sinise's bomb

by Stephen NOTLEY

Review

Impostor
Opens Friday, Jan. 4
Starring Gary Sinise
Cineplex Odeon

A title card at the beginning of Impostor informs us that the film is based on a short story by Philip K. Dick. It goes on to point out that the original short story was "written in 1953," presumably to blow us away with its "how could he have known?" prophetic magic. Which would be great if we all lived in electro-domes and worried about robot bombs that look and act just like regular people, but as far as I'm aware, we don't and aren't.

Impostor opens this week, but I bet you've barely heard of it. And there's a good reason for that: it's a cheap, sucky movie that nobody wants to spend good advertising money on. The one commercial I've seen tries to tart the thing up with the promise of a little CGI and some identity-swapping good times, but it's a trick. Don't believe it.

In brief, Gary Sinise is a guy who gets grabbed one day and told that, hey, he's not Gary Sinise but a robot duplicate who just thinks he's Gary Sinise. Oh, and he's also a bomb.

There's always an argument that ensues in stories like this, whether its an episode of Deep Space Nine or The Sixth Day, that Schwarzenegger movie about clones that nobody saw. The conversation goes like this:

"Hey, you're making a big mistake here. I'm Gary Sinise."

"No you're not — you're just a robot with Gary Sinise's memories. Now give us the bomb codes!"

"No, really — I'm Gary Sinise."

"Bomb codes, robot!"

And so on. I mean, what the hell is the point of interrogating a robot who thinks he's Gary Sinise? Whether he is or isn't, he's not going to be able to tell you anything either way. He's just gonna go on thinking he's Gary Sinise. You might as well just strap him into the drill-o-tron and dig the bomb out straight off.

Luckily (or unluckily, if you're the poor sap watching the movie), Gary is able to escape before the drill-o-tron (actually, the "vivosec") can perfom its drilly magic on his chest and prove one way or the other whether he really is a robot.

Unfortunately, from then on, that's all this movie's got: is he the bomb-bot or isn't he? Surely we're not going to have to wait until the end of the movie to find out, right? There's gotta be more to it than that, right?

But there so isn't. Gary doesn't even indulge in a little "What if I really am a bomb?" philosophizing on the way; it's all just run, run, run, all through some of the blandest, most generic sci-fi cityscapes ever. Impostor looks okay in its opening moments, with a whiff of half-decent production design and a couple of acceptable effects shots. But once Gary's on the run, Impostor defaults to the standard ultra-cheap sci-fi settings of bombed-out buildings, nighttime wastelands strewn with broken concrete, and — my favourite — damp underground tunnels.

I went into this movie hoping there would be something kind of funky or unique about its look, and there wasn't. Then I hoped it might take some unusual approach to how it played out its premise. It didn't. What's left? A waste of time, really.

I suppose I'm wrecking the movie by saying that there's something of a twist at the end, and then kind of a half-twist after that. But I'm not really wrecking the movie, because you shouldn't be bothering with it anyway.

Bigger Beast

Disney 'classic' gets IMAXed

by Stephen NOTLEY

Review
Beauty and the Beast
Now showing
Silver City IMAX
★★★ (out of five)

A Beauty and the Beast. A tale as old as time, and by that I mean it originally came out in 1991.

Today, in 2002, we know Disney animation as a grinding exercise in exhausted formula filmmaking characterized by sappy musical numbers and peppily annoying secondary characters. Pocahontas, The Hunchback of Notre Dame, Hercules, Mulan… each one an increasingly desperate attempt to squeeze something living out of a once-vital movie playbook.

In fact, these days the formula is so tired they've even taken to fiddling with it by removing the songs; witness last year's Dinosaur. And then, of course, there was this year's big Disney animated movie. Anybody recall what that was? Anybody at all? Does Atlantis ring any bells? I thought not.

In fact, Disney seems to have almost given up on their own in-house animated epics entirely and just handed the responsibility over to Pixar, who went on to make Toy Story, Toy Story 2, and Monsters Inc.

But 10 years ago, the Disney formula wasn't even a formula yet, and their movies were good. In 1990, after years of duds like Oliver and Company, Disney roared back into theatres with The Little Mermaid, which just happened to be awesome. People sat up and took notice, and in 1991 Disney followed Mermaid up with Beauty and the Beast, which was good enough to get nominated for Best Picture.

Well, it's 2002, and Beauty and the Beast is back, and it's on IMAX. For a big fancy-pants re-release, Disney hasn't really gone in and monkeyed with success too much. With the exception of one new song, Human Again, it's the same movie. Sure, it's been digitally remastered and blown up for IMAX and all that, but that's about it.

And as a movie, y'know, B&tB still works. Yes, it's got all the elements that became clichés. It has the big musical numbers and the crowd of cutesy animated sidekicks. But, durn it, it was charming then, and somehow that charm has lasted.

For instance, the music was by Howard Ashman and Alan Menken, the Broadway hitmakers responsible for Little Shop of Horrors, and they provide a good half-dozen snappy little songs, easy. And if you're going to have cutesy side characters, you might as well have them in a story with a castle full of people who've been turned into all-too-animated inanimate objects. At least that makes some kind of sense, and as formulaic as this stuff later became, you have to appreciate the cleverness and wit the Disney animators bring to the work of bringing all those candles and clocks and teapots to life.

It's weird to watch it on the big big screen and see that old cel animation style without 10 years' worth of Photoshopping dumped on top. You can actually see the scratchiness in the lines, evidence of actual pens driven by real human hands in the creation of these drawings. When we finally see the big computer-generated ballroom scene (fancy in its time), there's a palpable wave of nostalgia.

True, the story is pretty simple and looks even simpler now that we've seen movies like Shrek that invert the whole the-spell-is-broken climax. And it's still a major bummer, at the end, to see the cool Beast magically turn into a flaxen-haired Eurogimp with the fullest lips I've ever seen animated on a man before. But what the hell. Kids, families… they could easily do worse than to revisit Beauty and the Beast.

Unaltered state

Ken Russell psych-out the same on DVD

by Scott SHARPLIN

Review
Altered States
directed by Ken Russell available on DVD

Poor Ken Russell's had a bad decade. The naughty boy of British cinema (if you discount Peter Greenaway, Derek Jarman, Alex Cox, and many other naughtier directors) hasn't shocked anyone since he cast his wife in the title role in 1991's Whore. In his day, Russell was the director of choice for sexually repressed anti-socialites — a major demographic in the days before PG-13. Now, all but forgotten outside of his homeland, Russell's major contribution to film history is twofold: he directed The Who's Tommy; and he did Altered States.

The 1980 psych-out, starring William Hurt and foxy Blair Brown, depicts the dangers of getting too close to God, especially when your method of transport involves powerful psychoactive fungus and an isolation tank.

The film is a curious mixture of cautionary tale, love story, and psycho-spiritual light show à la 2001: A Space Odyssey. It begins with Hurt, an ex-hippie with father issues, trying to re-awaken the religious hallucinations which plagued his youth; and it ends with people turning into apes, bioluminescent lizards, and giant, howling pools of protoplasmic energy. There's also a healthy quantity of sex, and an unhealthy amount of drug trips.

Russell is nothing if not a visual director, and his motifs — snakes, Christian and Satanic imagery, naked women — yield some of his most inspired moments in Altered States. There's one remarkable scene where Hurt, tripping on Mexican peyote, encounters his wife, foxy Blair Brown, in the wilderness. The two regard one another until wind covers them both with a thick, grey dust. Then, incredibly, millennia pass, and we watch as the forms of Hurt and Brown erode and crumble gradually, like statues.

The light-show scenes at the end occasionally might even rival 2001's, in their potential to leave even the straight viewer slack-jawed on the couch. The regressed-simian-loose-in-Boston scenes don't quite rank with 2001, but they have their moments. It all looks very nice on the DVD, which is impressive, considering the transfer is three years old.

Ultimately, the film suffers from the same flaws as most of Russell's work: corny dialogue, awkward pacing and a tacked-on resolution that fails to justify the excesses of the plot. But if you're into excess, or if you're a sexually repressed anti-socialite, Altered States remains a treat, and well worth checking out.

A Beautiful Mind A contrived attempt to earn someone an Academy Award and manipulative to the hilt, Ron Howard's bio-flick of mentally ill mathematician John Forbes Nash does sport a decent performance by Russell Crowe and a sweeping scope as 40 years of the academic and cold war codebreaker's life is recounted. Just keep in mind that it's "based" on a true story — strap on your BS detector. ★★★1/2 (FG)

Ali Will Smith's weight-gaining, voice-impersonating turn as boxing great Muhammed Ali is getting all the ink, but it's the surprisingly subtle work of Michael Mann behind the camera that makes this biopic work so well. Spanning a bit more than a decade of Ali's career, the movie offers a peek behind the persona which became so well known to the private man. Not to say it isn't a bit of a whitewash, but the entertainment quotient is high. ★★★★ (SN)

Amélie Audrey Tautou stars in this playful, zippy comedy by Jean-Pierre Jeunet (Delicatessen, Alien Resurrection). She plays a shy woman who mischievously dabbles in the lives of others. Embedded in the beautifully visualized and photographed tale is a sweet little love story. It may not be a movie of great depth, but the perpetual delights offered are enough to sustain you right to the final credits. (SL) ★★★★

Behind Enemy Lines You might mistake it for a real action movie, but no one could accidentally make a movie this trite, hollow, contrived and jingoistic. Therefore this must be a clever parody of action movies, and a rather dark comedy at that, given its use of the attempted genocide in Bosnia for background colour. Owen Wilson and Gene Hackman masterfully rehash the oldest dialogue in the book as a hotshot Navy pilot and hard-ass admiral, respectively, who bring peace and justice to war-torn Bosnia as only Americans can. Of course, there's a chance it's every bit as crass, jingoistic and stupid as it appears. To be safe: ★ (SL)

Fellowship of the Ring Whoa! It's conceivable that this first instalment of The Lord of the Rings trilogy couldn't have been made any sooner than just now, as it seems to take advantage of the most modern advances to bring Tolkien's Middle Earth to life. That said, the grand themes and emotions that drive the story don't get mowed under by the spectacle. Director Peter Jackson has made the first 21st century epic. Packed with thrills, chills and heroic characters, Fellowship is a triumph for everyone involved. The bad part? You'll have to wait a year for Part II. ★★★★★ (SL)

Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone No two ways about it, this is a great kids' movie filled with magic and owls. The story of a boy off to his first year of wizard school is creepy and funny and enjoyable. But those of us not under Harry's global thrall can't help notice that it's a touch long and that, exciting as Harry is, he doesn't seem to grow much through the course of his adventures. The filmmakers have the magic nailed, but they don't convey much of the wonder of being a boy on the verge of discovering a new and secret world. ★★★ (SL)

Joe Somebody You can see why they rushed to get this movie into theatres in December. This thing's got Oscar contender written all over it — the charmingly familiar performance as a suburban male by Tim Allen, the imaginative moralizing of the screenplay, the humour, which owes a huge debt to Allen's work on television, the ending you can see coming about 30 seconds into the film ... I'm kidding of course, this is run-of-the-mill dreck which doesn't even bother to be funny, never mind interesting. ★ (SL)

Kate and Leopold A run-of-the-mill time-travel romantic comedy — oh, how did we become so jaded? — is salvaged from a nonsensical plot and slightly tired material by the charms of its leads and the lighter than usual touch of director James Mangold. Meg Ryan and Hugh Jackman are quite watchable as the modern gal who falls for the chivalrous charms of a nobleman from the previous century. The movie underwent a last-minute re-edit to excise references to possibility that the lovers are also relatives. ★★★ (RS)

The Majestic Dewy-eyed Cineplex palaver from star Jim Carrey and director Frank Darabont gives us America the way it wasn't in the tale of a man who loses his memory and takes the place of a beloved small-town guy believed killed in WWII. Darabont clearly wants to evoke a Frank Capra vibe in his depiction of lovable small town types, but Jim Carrey is no Jimmy Stewart and the film lacks a sense of humour about itself. Something this long and heart-string plucking will probably have an Oscar thrown at it. ★★ (ET)

Ocean's 11 It's rare that Hollywood can make a winning motion picture and still remain Hollywood, but director Steven Soderbergh is a rare talent. Ocean's 11 isn't art, but its fast pace, tongue-in-cheek humour and avoidance of carnage for entertainment's sake should be enough to disarm your critical capacities until the final credits roll. ★★★★ (SL)

Shallow Hal Allegedly a feel-good comedy with important lessons for us all about seeing people's inner beauty, Ben Stiller in The Royal Tenenbaums, opening this week.

the latest Farrelly brothers' movie is freighted with its own rather ugly assumptions about human value based on looks. Assumptions aside, Shallow Hal isn't terribly funny, and becomes even less so as it wears on and its finger-wagging becomes more vigorous. ★★ (SL)

The Shipping News Annie Proulx's oddball novel about a doormat named Quoyle who discovers life on the frigid shores of Newfoundland turns into a self-consciously Oscar-quality filmed adaptation filled with heart-string pulling, variable interpretations of the Newfoundland accent and symbolism so obvious and repetitive it leaves bruises. The drama of the novel remains intact, but its built-in humour gives way to a self-pitying tone that makes the movie a long slog. Kevin Spacey is miscast as the doughy nebbish Quoyle and seems to spend the entire movie supressing his charisma. Other than that, not bad. ★★★1/2 (KW)

Spy Game Director Tony Scott (Enemy of the State) has a lot of experience injecting thrills into action premises, but give him a little dialogue to work with and he's stumped. He squanders the assets he has in leads Robert Redford and Brad Pitt and makes this serviceable spy yarn lead-footed. Still, it's always a treat to see someone like Redford do what they do so well. ★★1/2 (JL)

Vanilla Sky Director Cameron Crowe's reach exceeds his grasp in this remake of Alejandro Amenabar's Abre los Ojos. Tom Cruise is the jerky-but-hip playboy who falls in love with a dancer (Penelope Cruz), then falls victim to his spurned fuck-buddy (Cameron Diaz), leading to his terrible disfiguration in a deliberate car crash. The film's biggest shortcoming is that no one in their right mind should like the protagonist, though the film seems to endorse him as sympathetic. The film's next greatest shortcoming is that it doesn't do anything as well as the movie it's based on. ★★ (ET)

Getting in the rhythm

Just because you're a two-planker, it doesn't mean you're a square. And nobody said you have to ski like a drill sergeant on the parade grounds. Loosen up! Flow with the rhythm of the hill. Let your body bend.

It's a common mistake among less-experienced skiers: standing ramrod straight on the boards, knees locked and spine stiff. When you do that, you're pretty much restricted to wide, sweeping turns on smooth slopes.

You wanna hit moguls without mashing your nose into the snow? Relax. Here's a drill to help you learn how to do it:

Pick an easy slope. Stand at the top of the hill with your arms out in front of you, slightly bent. Keep your upper body relaxed, but stationary; only your lower body should be moving.

Start down the slope, gently turning back and forth. Begin each turn standing tall, but crouching as you go through it. Maintain your balance by rolling your knees into the hill so that your skis are on their edges.

Keep doing this drill until you feel the rhythm and are comfortable with it. Soon you'll be hitting the moguls like a free-styler.

Smash the steak

Unpretentious fare feeds global oppression

by Naomi KLEIN

So I and a pared-down Scooby Gang (just I, Noam Chomsky and Chairman Mao, this time) headed down to Albert's on Whyte for some lunch and to take on the globo-corporatist alliance, head-on.

The moment we walk through the door we are assaulted on all sides by globo-corporatist branding techniques — "posters" and "ads" and "words" designed to create a "brand identity" with Albert's. I resent this unasked-for intrusion into my media space, but sadly it's become all too common in 21st century Canada.

We take our seats and Chomsky says the Pork Sandwich looks juice. I have a tough time with the menu, since I don't want to support the globo-corporatists by eating eggs. Eventually I pick the Clam Chowder and some Garlic Toast. And a Side of Bacon. Chomsky gets the Pork Sandwich. Mao gets the Steak and Eggs. I think I got some Juice, too.

Review

Uncle Albert's on Whyte
Price range: $$$
Value: ★
Food: ★★
Service: ★
Overall: ★★★★★ (out of five)

As the corporate slave-drone took our order, I pitied her, forced to sell her life in slave-hour installments to the G-Cs, all while blinded and dulled by a irresistable flood of images designed to create brand loyalty. I attempted to engage her on this, but then Mao farted and everybody forgot what I was talking about.

We tipple from the jar of vodka Chomsky's got under his jacket, lean back, and take in the room. Other diners work on their meals, completely oblivious to the necessity of class consciousness for social change. And, of course, they're all drinking coffee, the number one tool of G-C oppression in the Americas.

After an interminable wait (attributable to the inherent inefficiencies of a solely market-driven economy, and a concomittantly exhausted labour force), the waitress brings our meals. The Chowder has a skin on top of it, which I hate. I stir the chowder around a bit, and dip the Garlic Bread in. Surprisingly delicious! If only this pleasure didn't come with a price-tag of near-infinite human suffering.

Meanwhile, Chomsky grabs his Pork Sandwich before his plate even hits the table and starts stuffing it down his throat, smacking his lips and grinding his teeth so loudly people on the other side of the restaurant are looking at us

"Jesus, Chomsky," I say. "Settle down."

I take a bite of his sandwich. Not bad, though the pork is a little dry, but there's a creamy mustard that makes up for it. I grab some of Mao's Steak and Eggs; tasty, though again perhaps listing towards the overcooked. I've lost interest in the Clam Chowder, though; the skin's come back, and I don't think I can manage the energy to whisk it away again.

I ask Chomsky if I can have half of his sandwich; he says no way, bitch. Mao's already polished off most of his Steak and Eggs, and he stabs my hand with his fork when I try to grab some pan fries. Resentfully, I return to my Clam Chowder, blaming their anger on the inherent sexism of any system that rewards the pursuit of profit without a parallel commitment to human dignity.

At the end of the meal the waitress returns with what she called a "bill," some kind of coercive document stating that we were obligated to turn over a sum of money to the globo-corporatist managers of Albert's (with the implied threat, as always, of the use of state force if we choose not to comply). It comes to $25, including drinks, and somehow I end up having to put in 20 bucks. There's socialism for you.

ECLECTIC

Two Rooms Café 10324-82 Ave., Edmonton, 439-8386: Don't let the crowds on this Dominion Hotel eatery's patio deter you. Even if you have to wait for a table, it's worth it. If the food here was music it would be eclectic world beat and danceable. Overall Rating: ★★★

Normand's Jasper and 116 St., Edmonton, 482-2600: Restaurants rise and fall with regularity, but Normand's endures — in part because they know how to ride fickle waves of fashion (cigar nights during the height of that craze) without losing sight of the basics of good cooking and a great night out. Overall Rating: ★★★★

CASUAL ELEGANT

Madison's Grill Union Bank Inn, Jasper Ave between 100 and 101 St., 421-7171 – Looking for a sure-fire room to impress the boss or that special someone? Then Madison's is the place for you: an endlessly charming, elegant hybrid room (half post-modern, half heritage Edwardian), gracious service and a flawless continental menu with a fusion mentality. Overall rating: ★★★★★.

Il Portico 10012-107 St., 424-0707 – In some dining rooms you go to spot celebrities, at Il Portico you are the celebrity (at least given the way they treat you). Delightful Italian/ continental offerings, buoyant room, brilliant wine cellar and only some of the best service staff in Edmonton make for a memorable dining event every time out. Overall : ★★★★★.

FAST FOOD (SIT-DOWN)

Badass Jack's Subs and Wraps, 8621-109 St., 439-8091 – As far as I am concerned, Badass Jack's is the first and last word in River City wraps. I'm getting hungry just writing their name. Overall rating: ★★★★.

Pharos Pizza, Corner of 109 Street and 87 Ave., 433-5205 – I'm not going to commit the huge faux pas of saying that Pharos is the best pizza in town (my god, that's like choosing a favourite among your children), but will state that it's certainly in my personal top 10. The joint also has that retro-diner coolness and is perfectly situated beside the Garneau Theatre for pre- or post-show pigging out. Overall rating: ★★★★.

VEGETARIAN/HEALTH

Max's Light Cuisine, 7809-109 St., 432-6241 – This tiny little lunch-box is my vote for the best in Edmonton's vegan cooking. Not the most elegant of rooms, but you'll come back for the fresh, well-prepared healthy food. Overall: ★★★.

Café Mosaics, 10844-82 Ave., 433-9702 – The closest thing the Scooby Review Gang has to a hang-out (Pop Tait, where are you). Bright menu with good veggie and vegan options with an accent of fresh ingredients and home-style cooking to compliment the up-to-date offerings. Cooler than cool. Overall rating: ★★★★.

COFFEE HOUSES AND PUBS

Celli's Irish Pub and Restaurant just off 109 St. and 104 Ave., 426-5555 – A might fine Celtic eatery across the street from the downtown GMCC. Fave dishes include: The Five Counties Dip (home-made guacamole, salsa, black bean sauce, sour cream and aged cheddar) and the massive Corned Beef and Cabbage Boxty (golden potatoey and dripping with a rich creamy corned beef/cabbage goodness). **★★★★.

INTERNATIONAL

Kyoto Japanese Cuisine, Corner of Jasper Ave. and 109 St. – A Scooby Review gang favourite. Good Japanese offerings served in Asian decorum in a calm, tastefully pointed room. Easy enough on the pocketbook given the quality to boot. Overall rating: ★★★★.

Koutouki Taverna 10704—124 St., Edmonton, 452-5383: I feel full just thinking about this fine Greek eatery Talk about your adept take on home-style Mediterranean cooking (and loads of it) served with delightful panache in a tidy little 124th St. location just down from the Roxy. Overall rating: ★★★★

Sushi Wasabi 5714-111 St., Edmonton You can taste the love at Sushi Wasabi. Laid-back urban classy without being fussy, comfortable without being overly familiar, while always focusing on a deft take on traditional melt-in-your mouth Japanese cuisine that screams fresh, fresh, fresh. Overall Rating: ★★★★★

SEVEN DAYS IN THE CITY

PICK OF THE WEEK

Edmonton's Festival of Plummeting Temperatures begins this week and carries on for the next three fucking months. Locals celebrate by donning outfits that make burqas look slinky, trebling their liquor intake and succumbing to nigh-crippling depression during the first week of February. Festival passes are available every time you set foot outside. On the bright side, it's just seven months until the Festival of Broken Glass, slated for Canada Day.

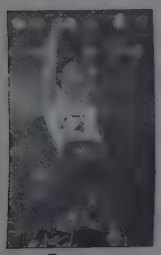
THURSDAY



Edmonton's affection for '80s-metal drag shows reaches a pinnacle as the original lineup of RATT plays Randy Hemkowich's 11th birthday party (130000 - 1115 Ave.). Along with the original bad boys of metal who burst onto the international rock scene in 1986 with Up from the Cellar, punch and pie will be served. Invite only; don't forget to bring a gift.

FRIDAY

DJs MDMA, creeeeeeeempuff and Jackpuppy spin their blend of trance-hardhouse-techno-garagetwo-step-hopedelia as LAXative (location undisclosed) hosts another all-night dance party. Enjoy the ambient sounds of Appliance Hum in the teeth-grinding room, fork over $4 for a bottle of water and go home at dawn with chromosome damage. Special party hats for the first 12 people through the door, which opens at 3 a.m.

SATURDAY

Deviated Septum returns from the dead for their first gig of 2002. The quartet, whose unique blend of yodelling, answering machine noises and dulcimer won them fame upon their first appearance a few years back, are reuniting to split a pizza tonight at the Rosebowl. Dress is formal.

SUNDAY

Playwright Derwood Blech isn't out of whimsical allusions quite yet. His latest feather-light comedy, The Big Red Dog's Dream, draws heavily on the famous children's books about an oversized pooch named Clifford to tell the story of chronically socially inept but bookishly charming post-young adults struggling toward Big Realizations about life and love. The fun starts with a 2 p.m. matinee at the Utility Closet (boiler room, Citadel Theatre). Limited seating.

MONDAY

Cultural appropriation is your best musical value! Manky Pete and Rockin' Eddie Manzichuk play the purest white-boy blues this side of Moose Jaw and they'll do it for next to nuthin' tonight at Lunch Pump (where your car is as welcome as you are). Check out their latest recorded effort, Suburban High School Drop-out Blues, on Passing Complexion Records.

TUESDAY

Baffled by modern dance? Feel free to take a pass on Dunstable Babarnley's essence/excr/essence, a six-hour voyage into idiosyncratic and impenetrable physical gestures accompanied by a score played entirely with wire coat-hangers and a refrigerator. Babarnley explores the construction of the masculine in society and, through movement, asks the age-old question, "Have you seen the size of my package?" ID required.

WEDNESDAY

Turns out all those kooky fundamentalist Christians were right! God's wrath is visited on the Festival City today as the Lord Almighty smites those who persist in their worldly ways and have wreacked not the wages of sin. Face-painting, sorely aggrieved street performers and a pita kiosk make this Divine Atonement a retribution for the whole family.

Tickets available at TM.

A WILL TO MURDER The Friends of Rutherford House Society, Rutherford House, 11153 Saskatchewan Drive, 422-2697 — Jan. 10, 11 & 12. Join the likes of Jebediah Shambles and the Peon Quadruplets for a family reunion that will kick up a storm the likes of which the dust bowl has never seen. Take the time to set awhile, and bend your ear to the fine pickings of a local strummer. You and yours can poke your mitts into a little old spread of finger grub that'll make you think of the good ole days. We'll even have something sweet to wet your whistle. Be sure to get here before it's all gone — doors open at 7:30 p.m., and Mrs. Moneysworth does not take kindly to tardy folks. $20 will get you an invite, but only so many can attend, so cash in your wooden nickels and drop us a dime.

How much is too much?

Is it a problem when your girlfriend has five or six orgasms? Huh?

Dear Josey,

I am 46 years old and my girlfriend is 31. When we first got together, she said she had never experienced an orgasm and told me not to be disappointed. However, she climaxed several times that first night, and continues to be multi-orgasmic whenever we have sex. But now, after about five or six climaxes, she complains of pain. Is this normal or is she just not used to this much activity?

Having Too Much Fun?

Dear Having,

You remind me of the guy last month who complained that his girlfriend gushed too much when she came. Interesting that in both cases the letters came from the boyfriends and not the gals. But I'm sure you're genuinely concerned and all that stuff about how your girlfriend fires off orgasms like a machine gun now that she's with you is just background…

Anyhoo, let's talk about her pain, shall we? First, it's hard to tell what's going on without a clearer description: Is it a sharp, stabbing pain, a dull thud, or a run-screaming-to-the-bathroom-my-cunt-is-on-fire kind of pain?

And even then, no one I spoke to had heard of pain specifically related to multiple orgasms (though I personally experienced some bad arm cramping and sore butt cheeks after a nine-orgasm masturbation session I did for charity once).

There are, however, several conditions with fancy names that involve vaginal pain. Dyspareunia, which can result from pelvic inflammatory disease or endometriosis among other things, causes pain deep in the vagina upon penetration. Vaginismus is when your vagina clams up and won't let anybody in. And women with vestibulitis — chronic inflammation of the vulva — experience pain upon entry or during foreplay, and may feel intense burning after intercourse.

Is the pain all in her head? Sex headaches — also known as coital cephalgia or orgasm migraines — can happen as a result of sex, though men actually get this five times as often as women. (These headaches can last from several minutes to days.)

Of course, it may depend on how you're achieving these multiple orgasms. Stimulation through extensive rubbing action could be causing bladder infections in your honey's pot. If she feels burning when she pees after sex, this could be what's going on.

Then again, maybe all those women out there who can barely squeeze one piddly orgasm during sex have placed a curse on her.

I suggest you get your gal to visit a gyno where she can explain the pain to someone who can actually have a look-see.

'I personally experienced some bad arm cramping and sore butt cheeks after a nine-orgasm session I did for charity.'

Dear Josey,

I am a recently separated man, and after several years of marriage, I'm keen to learn more about oral sex — my ex-wife wouldn't let me go down on her, claiming she didn't like it. Do you have any tips for pleasing a woman orally?

Orally Challenged

Dear Orally,

Glad to see you're looking at the bright side of having your marrriage fall apart. I wish I could send you a couple of practice gals but this is pretty much a learn-as-you-go skill. That's not to say you can't go in with some basic rules. Just remember, every woman is different — what works on one gal may not on the next.

Read her body language. If she's shifting around a lot you're probably not getting it. If she's shoving her crotch into your face, she probably wants a little more pressure. Take things slow. Start by pleasing her aurally. Talk; tell her what you'd like to do. See how it goes over. Spend time staking out the area. Set up camp on her inner thighs for a while. Let your lips brush the forest but don't head into the woods just yet. The more build-up, the less tongue strain you'll suffer later.

Also, just because you've seen it in porn, doesn't mean the ladies like it. I detest flicky tongues, for example, but that's the first thing fellas do in them pictures. But I'm sure some gal loves this. Again, never assume. And don't stick to one move too long. Of course, if you're heading in for home — the curled toes and that Linda Blair from The Exorcist look on her face would indicate you're close — don't even think about changing what you're doing. Unless you are 100 per cent confident that you can get us back to this lovely place very soon.

Bon appetit!

Dear Josey,

I love sex! And I love my boyfriend, although he has trouble staying hard. I'm 20 and he's only 29. Should I suggest that he consult a doctor for a prescription of Viagra? Would this pill even solve the problem? Is he too young?

Hard Times

Dear Hard,

I guess it depends how you suggest it. "Honey, why don't you get your ass to a doctor for some Viagra so you can have decent erection for once?" might not be the way to go.

The fact that you say he has trouble means that he does still manage to achieve erection. Most erectile problems are caused by years of bad habits — smoking, drinking, heavy drug use, a fatty diet. Since your guy seems too young for that, this problem may be more psychological than physical.

It's perfectly normal for a guy's pecker to occasionally be less-than-enthusiastic. It may seem like it sometimes, but it's not a machine with an on/off switch. Stress, fatigue, too much booze one night — these can put a wilt in his willy.

As can worrying about maintaining an erection. If he's lost it once, the sheer nervousness about losing it again can be the very thing that makes him limp. Sadly, we've come to rate a guy's entire sexual performance on how hard his dick is. Which makes it a touchy subject.

Have you two talked about this?

If you haven't, you need to. Just don't make it a big deal. Reassure him you're not bothered by it (even if you are you won't help matters by saying so), and let him know that if it's bugging him, he can discuss it with you and you'll work on it together.

If things don't improve, a little boost might be just the thing! I know a guy with a similar problem who took Viagra just a few times — it was enough to get him back on track. Nothing like a couple solid erections to improve your confidence, I suppose.

As for him being too young for the drug, Viagra's manufacturer, Pfizer, simply says it cannot be prescribed to children. At 29, your guy's safely out of the woods.

CRUISIN' THE COSMOS

JANUARY 3-9

with THE KID

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19)
The next II's while's gonna be a bit of a rough time, but in the grand scheme o' things that's actually just fine. The strongest swords are [illegible] strength higher, so you'll be able to cut through and get to anything you desire. Right now, don't be afraid 'cause very soon you'll have it made.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 19)
Lookin' for something to keep your head off your heart? Well, mindin' your money-making is a good place to start. What you should be worried about now is work most of all, to ensure that your profits and/or rep doesn't fail. Keep your brain's strain on attainin' wealth and let your heart take care of itself!

PISCES (Feb. 20 - March 20)
Your symbol is two fish pullin' in opposite directions, and this should give you a clue as to the [illegible] of perfection [illegible] without [illegible] and you'd have no reason to smile if there was no season to frown. You'll eventually go insane if you think you can have pleasure without havin' pain!

ARIES (March 21 - April 19)
Although things may be less than stellar right now, that's all about to change real soon — and how. What seems to be borin' and lame at the moment is simply one of your life story's components. You have no idea how good your life's gonna look when you close this chapter and start the next one in your book!

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)
Those horns you're sportin' on the top of your skull can really hurt someone and that ain't no bull. However, hurtin' someone now'd make a mess 'cause what you'd be hurtin' is your chance at success. This week, do your best to mind your horns so someone don't get an unreserved gorin'.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)
[illegible] when they aren't there, and when they are, you won't see 'em or care. The only thing watchin' your back is an assessment of the cold, hard facts. Your right brain need not apply 'cause it's your analytical left brain that'll get you by.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22)
Now that the temperature's too cold to go out and roam, turn your attention to tasks in the [illegible] your life's space, since it's the main place you go to escape the [illegible]. This is the time to take pleasure in the walls of your castle 'cause when all's said and done, [illegible] you're totally [illegible]!

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22)
This week, you'll be hangin' [illegible] happy [illegible] if you want to keep it there, you'll have to adopt the policy of laissez-faire. In fact, the more you fret and stress, the more you sabotage your happiness. They say a watched pot never boils, but in this case, if you watch it too closely [illegible] blow up!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22)
It ain't actually like your Karma account's overdrawn, but at the rate you're takin' it out, you better make a deposit before long. Now that you're actually in a position to give, [illegible] and make it a lovelier place to live. Besides, this week, if you're all "what can you do for me?" you [illegible] joy overall!

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22)
Since you're the zodiac's comedienne, it ain't no surprise you're a perfectionist. That's why you're a bit critical when the beauty of [illegible] life is not to [illegible] you're always seeking a higher peak and he's exactly what you'll find sometime this weekend. Follow the things that inspire and [illegible] you [illegible].

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21)
This week, you'll see that it [illegible] you're [illegible] universe'll go on with or without you. [illegible] be whatever the heck you want to 'cause you've bogged down in the idea that politeness is the one chance where you can't miss. Remember as you go along each day, you just [illegible] and [illegible].

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21)
Wish you need to realize this week is that folks you think with don't hate ya, they just [illegible] with your fiery nature. They're not used to cookin' with gas, so they're not sure what to do when it gets so hot so fast. Although you don't need to put out your pilot light, turnin' up the heat wouldn't [illegible] a bad idea.

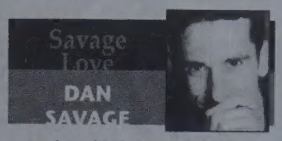
Father knows best?

Snooping daughters are overreacting to dad's taste in titillation



Over the last few years, my father has spent countless hours holed up in his study on the computer. Because he's such a boring person, it was a big family joke that he was probably looking at porn. It wasn't until a recent family vacation when my sister borrowed our dad's laptop that we learned that he really was looking at porn. After we investigated his various computers (we wanted to believe it was somehow a mistake) we discovered that a majority of the porn was of "underage" girls. Some of it was rather hardcore stuff. I don't think my father has the savvy to find illegal child porn, so I doubt any of the pictures he's downloaded are of anyone who's actually under 18.

Once we got over the initial repulsion (he even downloads stuff to his Palm Pilot!), my sister became frightened for her children. My father never did anything out of the norm when my sister and I were growing up, and he never did anything with any of our friends. My father has a degenerative disease and I know it prevents him from having any kind of sex life with my mother, so although I find the underage stuff revolting, I'm not really concerned.

My sister, however, no longer wants her young children to be able to spend the night at my parents' house, and since we aren't planning on telling our mother (or our father for that matter), I'm not sure how she's going to pull this off for the rest of everyone's lives.

What do you think? Is my sister overreacting or should she keep her kids away from him?

Worried About Dad

You and your sister should be ashamed of yourselves. Your father was kind enough to lend your sister his laptop, and his daughters repaid this kindness by launching an "investigation" into his various computers — even his Palm Pilot! And now, thanks to your snooping, you know more about your father's sexual fantasies than you want or have a right to. For shame.

Is your sister overreacting? Yes, I believe she is. I'm not going to spend a lot of time defending your father's taste in pornography because, hey, I think "underage" porn is creepy too. (The same goes for a lot of over-age porn.) But so long as the "underage" porn on your father's computer features youthful-looking adult women (18+) there's nothing illegal about it and no harm in it. And finding hot-teen-slut porn on your father's computer is not proof that he's a child molester. There are a lot of straight men out there who fantasize about being with underage girls. From sleazy cheerleaders to worldly Catholic high school students, "underage" girls fuel the sexual fantasies of millions and millions of straight men. The desire to fuck someone who's young and fertile and post-pubescent is not evidence of some horrifying sexual dysfunction. Genetically speaking, it's what men were designed to do.

That said, the vast majority of men who fantasize about hot teen sluts have no interest in being with actual teen sluts-or with actual children. You write that your father didn't have any kiddie porn on his computers or his laptop because he isn't savvy enough to find it. (Way to give your dad the benefit of the doubt!) But finding kiddie porn online is depressingly easy, WAD, so it's possible that your father isn't downloading kiddie porn because he simply isn't interested in kiddies. Considering that your father never behaved in a sexually inappropriate way with you, your sister, or your friends, maybe the old man has earned the benefit of the doubt.

Unfortunately your sister can't unlearn what she learned snooping around your father's computer. Rather than destroy her relationship with your mother and father by suddenly refusing to let him get near her children, she's going to have to confront him: "Dad, when I was using your computer, I found some porn on it that disturbed me. I'm sorry for snooping, and I know in my heart that you would never hurt your grandchildren, but I want to hear it from your own mouth."

He'll be mortified, of course, but far worse is in store for your sister. To set her mind completely at ease your sister is going to have to have a discussion with your dad that no woman wants to have with her father: A long, involved, detailed conversation about her father's sexual fantasies. She'll have to ask your father exactly what runs through his mind when he looks at those pictures. Your sister may find some comfort hearing that, while your dad enjoys contemplating 16-year-old girls while he masturbates (or whatever he does), child molestation and incest are not among his fantasies. Your sister can decide for herself if dad's telling the truth.

I've been dating a guy for almost two years. We recently split because of his mother and his ex-girlfriend, who he was with for 12 years. His ex-girlfriend lives in an apartment in his mother's house. This girl and her new boyfriend are "regulars" at family gatherings and even use the family vacation home! My boyfriend insists that his ex-girlfriend is a "member of the family" and "just a friend." My boyfriend's mother, who knows I don't approve, invites this girl to family gatherings knowing that I refuse to come if his ex-girlfriend is invited.

It's her right to invite whomever she cares to, but I feel that it's an insult to me for her to invite this girl now that I'm a part of her son's life. I was left alone on Christmas because I refused to take part of their family gathering knowing this girl would be there. Part of me feels that my boyfriend has been brainwashed by his mother into believing that this situation is a-okay. Any suggestions?

He's My Man Now

I have one suggestion: Grow the fuck up.

You may be a part of your boyfriend's life, but his ex was a part of his life — and, by extension, his mother's life — for 12 years. So when your boyfriend tells you his ex is a member of his family he's not feeding you some line of shit. After 12 years, his ex is a member of the family, you dolt. And if you want to be a member of his family, you're going to have to accept her presence.

Being around people you don't necessarily like is the price we all pay at holidays for having families. Asking your boyfriend's mother to exclude (or evict) someone she's known and loved for 12 years, someone with whom she has a relationship independent of her son, all because her son is seeing someone who's manipulative and insecure isn't going to endear you to anyone. Given the choice between her son's pleasant ex-girlfriend and the manipulative, insecure little bitch he's dating now, your boyfriend's mother is going to choose the ex every time.

You obviously don't know a good thing when you've got it. Any sane person would be anxious to be part of a family that doesn't turn its back on in-laws when a relationship doesn't work out. Your boyfriend's family sounds healthy and well-adjusted. If that's not to your taste, there are plenty of guys out there with unhealthy, fucked-up families that might be more to your liking.
